Question 2 of 75

A husband and wife both die in a disaster. The wife is the primary beneficiary of the policy. Which policy would best provide for the needs of the child?

- ☐ Juvenile
- ☐ First-to-die
- ☒ Second-to-die
- ☐ Family income

Correct

Correct Answer: Second-to-die policy.

Survivorship life policies, or Second-to-Die policies, insure TWO lives and pay out a death benefit upon the death of the SECOND insured. This is the type of policy that typically comes to mind when looking for a way to deal with estate tax issues for couples. However, this type of policy is also commonly used to provide for a handicapped child after both parents have died.

The question makes it clear that the financial need will arise after the death of the second parent, making the survivorship policy (second-to-die) a good solution in providing for the needs of the handicapped child after both parents have died. (1587)
