Renewable term insurance can be best described as:

- ☐ A decreasing death benefit
- ☐ A level death benefit with a decreasing premium
- ☒ A level death benefit with an increase in premium
- ☐ An increasing death benefit with a level premium

Correct

Correct Answer: A level death benefit with an increase in premium 固定保额+保费增加

Unless specified otherwise, one would assume that a term life policy is a LEVEL term insurance policy meaning the death benefit is level and does not change over time.

When a renewable term life policy renews at the end of its current term, the premiums will typically increase because the insured is now older than he/she was at the beginning of the previous term. (2082)

Correct Answer: They always offset inflation.

Variable life insurance policies are named so because when premiums are paid into the plan, the portion of the premium that is allocated to the investment portion of the policy will "vary," as it is subject to the up and down fluctuations of the underlying equity market. It is important to note that investment markets can both rise and fall. With this in mind, it is possible that the value of a variable life insurance policy's investment component could fall if the underlying investments perform poorly. (2150)

Correct Answer: The program is considered "fully funded."

Social Security is currently financed through both FICA contributions (i.e. payroll taxes) and through Social Trust Fund expenditures. Most would argue that it is badly underfunded, which is why we've been hearing for years that something needs to be done to fix it. If it were fully funded, it wouldn't be necessary to dip into the Trust Fund to help pay for it. (2009)
